Text: MOUNTAINFAMILY to 84576 to receive parish updates

We all remember the story of the Arabian Nights. The Sultan wed many wives and killed many wives. Till he met Scheherazade. Every night she told him a story, but left it unfinished until the next night. The Sultan would not dare kill her, for he wanted to know the ending and so she strung him along for a thousand nights. By that time, of course, he fell in love with her.

We all carry Sultan's instinct. We have an insatiable curiosity to know what happens next. We're never content to let a story lie still. We're always asking, "and then what?"

The four canonical gospels – Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John – don't tell us everything about what Jesus said and did. They do not, for example, give a description of Jesus, tell us what happened to Mary and Martha, Lazarus, the twelve Apostles, the people in today's gospel who asked to follow Jesus. Somehow, we feel unsatisfied. We want to know. "But then what happened?"

Around the year 600 AD an apocryphal book appeared called The Arabic Gospel of the Infancy of Our Lord. The book covers Mary and Joseph's escape journey into Egypt with the Christ Child. (Your curiosity might find you wanting to read it!) Oh! Two other characters are described in this book: Dismas and Gestas. Dismas segued into Saint Dismas and he eventually became the patron saint of thieves.

Now, another story. There is a priest named Emil Kapaun from Kansas. He is being promoted for sainthood. He was a military chaplain during the Korean War. In November 1950, the North Koreans captured him and 1200 American fighting men. The American POWs got so little food they were on the verge of starvation, so every night Father Kapaun crept out of the barracks to steal corn, millet, and soybeans from the guard's storehouse to feed the soldiers. Before Father Kapaun went out to steal, he prayed to St. Dismas, the good thief.

So, after you say, "I will follow you," what happens next?

Hacedores de la Palabra Domingo, 26 de junio de 2022 "¿Pero entonces qué pasó?"

Todos recordamos la historia de las mil y una noches. El sultán se casó con muchas esposas y mató a muchas esposas. Hasta que conoció a Scherezade. Cada noche ella le contaba una historia, pero la dejaba inconclusa hasta la noche siguiente. El sultán no se atrevería a matarla, porque quería saber el final y ella lo ató durante mil noches. En ese momento, por supuesto, se enamoró de ella.

Todos llevamos el instinto de Sultan. Tenemos una curiosidad insaciable por saber qué sucede a continuación. Nunca nos conformamos con dejar que una historia se quede quieta. Siempre estamos preguntando, "¿y luego qué?"

Los cuatro evangelios canónicos, Mateo, Marcos, Lucas y Juan, no nos dicen todo acerca de lo que Jesús dijo e hizo. No dan, por ejemplo, una descripción de Jesús, nos dicen qué pasó con María y Marta, Lázaro, los doce Apóstoles, las personas en el evangelio de hoy que pidieron seguir a Jesús. De alguna manera, nos sentimos insatisfechos. Queremos saber. "Pero entonces, ¿qué pasó?"

Hacia el año 600 dC apareció un libro apócrifo llamado El Evangelio árabe de la infancia de Nuestro Señor. El libro cubre el viaje de escape de María y José a Egipto con el Niño Jesús. (¡Tu curiosidad podría darte ganas de leerlo!) ¡Oh! En este libro se describen otros dos personajes: Dimas y Gestas. Dimas se convirtió en San Dimas y finalmente se convirtió en el santo patrón de los ladrones.

Ahora, otra historia. Hay un sacerdote llamado Emil Kapaun de Kansas. Está siendo promovido a la santidad. Fue capellán militar durante la Guerra de Corea. En noviembre de 1950, los norcoreanos lo capturaron a él y a 1200 combatientes estadounidenses. Los prisioneros de guerra estadounidenses tenían tan poca comida que estaban al borde de la inanición, por lo que todas las noches el padre Kapaun salía sigilosamente del cuartel para robar maíz, mijo y soja del almacén de la guardia para alimentar a los soldados. Antes de que el Padre Kapaun saliera a robar, rezaba a San Dismas, el buen ladrón.
